As part of the Wood Badge training, patrols design and create service project items that benefit Scouters. When the six-day training ends, these projects are stored in the warehouse at the Scout Office.

All projects listed here are either missing pieces, missing entirely or needing to be updated.

If you know the whereabouts or history of a project NOT listed here, please contact Anita at the Council Service Center 319-862-0541 or anita.munson@scouting.org.

“Jeopardy” game board

(MISSING THE 80 question and answer cards and 8 heading cards, three template sheets to create your own game cards.) Bruce Lyon-T42, has recreated some of the missing pieces but if the Eager Beavers could provide the original game pieces we will restore the project.

This is a game board to play a game for Jeopardy. There is space for four categories and five questions in each category, plus a category title card. For Wood Badge the game cards written have categories of Cub Scout, Boy Scout, Varsity, and Venturing answers and questions. Users can create their own cards using the paper templates included to adapt to any learning situation. Each peg should hold two cards. The lower card shows the answer to be read to the player (Jeopardy style). The higher card should have the point value facing the players and the question-response on the back side, so only the moderator can see it. The board has a hinged easel on the back so it can be set on a tabletop.

Equipment: Display board with hinged easel, 80 question and answer cards and 8 heading cards for two rounds of play, three template sheets to create your own game cards.

“A Solid Foundation for Scouting” house
(Handouts will need to be rewritten and reprinted to reflect current prices.)

This is a visual demonstration piece to assist in fundraising for Scouting. The handout compares the strong foundation of a house to funding a strong foundation in Scouting to build leaders of tomorrow.

Equipment: Foundation House, handouts and CD-ROM (circa 2006), easel

“Leadership Recruiting” tri-fold display board

Useful for recruiting adults, this display board displays the typical positions within a Scouting unit. Cards (4” x 6”) are inside plastic sleeves, which allow names to be written with dry-erase marker when the position is filled. Position description cards are provided to hand out to potential candidates.

The sleeves and some cards have magnetic backing, and more magnets are provided. Blank cards are provided to include tasks specific to a unit or a community. This project is mobile, durable, easy to use, and descriptive. Parents can see at a glance what it takes to run a pack and how many are already involved.

Currently, there are some title cards missing that could easily be duplicated. The display board, coated in metal paint, is missing. Many white-boards now accept magnets, so the cards could work with your own board.

Equipment: Most of the original position title cards and description cards, extra 1” magnets, blank cards, file card box.

Flag Etiquette display kit

A wooden case opens to provide the tools to teach aspects of flag etiquette to Scouts. Once opened, the “floor” made of pegboard allows for placement of flag poles, dais, and podium. The “wall” is covered in felt and holds flags displayed horizontally or vertically. The kit provides a small flagpole with rope and pulleys to demonstrate the raising and lowering a flag, and small flags for young Scouts to practice two-man folding. This project is self-contained, portable, and user-friendly.

Equipment: Case, dais, podium, a variety of flags on poles, medium flags, pole and rope, instructions and examples sheet.
